Dear Art :

Some 5-6 weeks ago I talked to Jim Huber on the telephone regarding the status of our paper " The Ultrastructural evidence of progressive deterioration in the blastodermal cells of chicken eggs during pre-incubation storage " . Because you had the manuscript at that time for review , I suggested to him that he talk to you about the matter , particularly from the stand point of revising the paper in light of your comments made to me , over the telephone , last fall .

He and I also agreed that you should be invited to join us as a co-author . This would be fitting because of all the time you have devoted to this project in all of its various stages , not the least of which , of course , is the preparation of the manuscript for publication . I assume that he has passed on to you our sentiments on this point , but if has not , then I should like to extend to you this invitation . The execution of this entire undertaking , both during its actual research phase and now in the writing-reporting phase has taken a great deal of time , collectively , on the part of all of us and , therefore , such effort should be propperly recognized .

I might add here that I am convinced that if you agree to join us as a co-author , this fact in itself would reflect favorably on the worth of the paper . I hope your response will be in the affirmative .

With best regards ,

sincerely

Igor L. Kosin
